Town takes Corey to court

An April 7 date has been set for a Superior Court hearing on alleged violations to the Wetlands Protection Act by Robert Corey, Assistant Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski told Wilmington selectmen Monday night.

Corey, owner and developer of a piece of property between Route 125 and Andover Street, has already been issued one Cease and Desist order, more than two years ago.

"He was served a cease and desist order two years ago and a stop work order," Conservation Commission Chester Bruce told the selectmen, "but now I have seen an advertisement selling used bricks off the premises."

"We are waiting to go to court, but meanwhile this violation continues. Who is responsible for enforcing this stop order?" asked Bruce.

Bruce charged that since the order was issued, two more acres were filled at the site, which lies dangerously near the Brown's Crossing wetlands, Wilmington's chief source for its water supply. Observers in the area have also noted the presence of an aluminum building on the site for which allegedly no permits were issued.

Rocco DePasquale, chairman of the board of selectmen requested Assistant Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski to direct the police department to take note of any activity on the site and issue a citation in the event of any violations.

DePasquale also said he planned to request a report from the town building inspector to see if there are any rules regarding the disposal of hazardous waste materials in the town.

According to Bruce, dumping is now taking place illegally "in five places in town." The town's own municipal dump was closed several years ago and trash pick-up was substituted. The dumping that Bruce referred to, however, was not done by homeowners.

"I have a pocket full of pictures that would stand your hair on end about what's going on in town and affecting Brown's Crossing," he said.

As a preventative measure, Bruce suggested contacting some of the town's industries before the fact of a violation, to inform them of the laws affecting the dumping of waste and of Wilmington's intention to follow through on them.

In response to a question from Anne Linehan, Bruce said he did not believe there were extensive amounts of hazardous materials being dumped in town. "There has been chromium dumped in Wilmington, but the state is investigating this," he said.

He suggested that the town initiate a method to find out which companies are using hazardous materials and to keep track of how much is brought into the town and how it is disposed of.

Bruce stressed that although the newly-formed state Hazardous Waste Management Authority will help towns with this problem, local police departments and conservation commissions will have to remain watchful as well.

"Water is the most vital resource we have and it is probably the biggest problem we have," said DePasquale. "I encourage the Conservation Commission to go out and stop at nothing to protect our water supply."

Arrest scene

The front plate on the car at left, which reads "Arrive Stoned" leaves no question as to which car was involved in the drug arrest at West Street and Suncrest Avenue early Tuesday morning.

Police hit drug ring, arrest 13

A drug ring operating within a large Wilmington industrial firm was broken up with the arrests of 13 people early Tuesday morning.

The arrests took place after a grand jury on Monday issued 39 indictments, including 15 against one person, on charges of conspiracy to sell and selling controlled substances.

A six-week investigation led up to the arrests, with three undercover officers working as employees of the firm. The investigation began at the request of company officials who had observed a drug sale taking place in a parking lot at a North Reading plant operated by the Wilmington firm. They called North Reading police, who, in turn, called in the Wilmington Police. The undercover officers were brought in from the M.D.C. and Revere Police Departments under a mutual aid agreement.

One of the arrests took place at the scene of a traffic accident on West Street at Suncrest Avenue, shortly after 7 a.m. Tuesday. The accident involved two cars not involved with the arrests. They collided when one of the undercover officers recognized a suspect's car and moved for the arrest. One woman sustained facial cuts in the accident.

The arrests began shortly after 5 a.m. Tuesday, at several locations in Massachusetts and New Hampshire. None of the suspects are Wilmington residents.

Wilmington Police Chief Bobby Stewart said that the drugs involved included marijuana, LSD, PCP, otherwise known as "angel dust," amphetamines, and barbiturates. Stewart said that the arrests were inter-related, and he termed the operation as being a major source.

In addition to the charges filed by the grand jury, all but one of the subjects are being charged with possession of drugs had in their possession when arrested. Stewart said that one person had a half pound of marijuana.

Stewart said that the name of the firm was not being released on agreement with company officials, and in hopes that the arrests might have a spin-off effect with other firms in town that might have similar problems.

The subjects arraigned in Cambridge Superior Court were:

Christopher Caserta, 45 Merrimac St., Woburn; Neil Sheehan, 761 O'Connell Blvd., Hampton, N.H.; Robert L. Carter, 2 Columbus Terr., Boston; Frank Spates, 459 Prospect St., Methuen; Paul DeVeau, 24 Thayer St., Methuen; Robert Bentham, 15 Laurie Dr., Tewksbury; Paul Perry, Main Street, Hampstead, N.H.; John W. Bailey, 4 Kenwin Rd., Winchester; James D. Rose, 15 May St., Lowell; Mildred Tortorella, 55 Winter St. Woburn; Derrick T. Hughes, 18 Howard Ave., Dorchester; Norris McKinney, 97 Washington Ave., Dorchester; Richard Vona, 8 Cherry Ave., Stoneham.

250th Anniversary Committee

There'll be fun on the Fourth if the funds come forth

Wilmington quietly passed the six-month mark in its 250th anniversary year on Tuesday, with the 250th Anniversary Committee busy preparing for a summer of activities.

The town will mark its anniversary on September 25, but the biggest day of activities will be on July 4, which will be capped with a fireworks display. The 250th anniversary parade has been scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 7.

Two new and energetic members have been added to the committee. Jack Cushing, a member of the Recreation Commission, and John Brown have both contributed several ideas to the committee already. Other committee members include Chairman Joan Maga, Robert Boyce, Robert Brown, Harriet Cain, Robert Cain, Rudy Carrasco, John Clark, Charles Kelley, Paula O'Brien and Adele Passmore.

On Monday evening, Cushing met with the selectmen and outlined the activities that he hopes to include in the celebration. One interesting event he mentioned is a "quadration," in which participants will run from Wilmington Common to Silver Lake, paddle across the lake to the town beach and back, then bicycle to the center, and run to the Common. Another event would be a one-pitch softball tournament, matching organization against organization, company against company, and neighborhood against neighborhood.

"You can be guaranteed we'll be having programs going on for the whole summer," said Cushing.

Cushing's first goal is to raise $10,000 for the July 4 fireworks. One problem that was explained to him at the selectmen's meeting is that all town committees must turn any monies received in to the general fund of the town, and work from an appropriation voted by the town meeting.

Two possible avenues are open to the committee. It can either seek an appropriation at the town meeting, or it can form a private organization to receive and disburse funds. The selectmen told Cushing to consult Town Manager Sterling Morris on the matter.

No money for the 250th Anniversary was included in the budget to be voted at the Annual Town Meeting on April 26.

The events for the entire summer will focus on the town common. The committee seeks to involve townspeople in the program as much as possible, including both input and fundraising. One avenue for staging events will be to encourage various organizations in town to hold events of their own, on the theme of the 250th anniversary. One such event would be the Kiwanis supper, an annual July 4 event on the common.

Stand up and be counted

April Fool's Day has a new image. In Wilmington at least, it's Census Day.

At the suggestion of Wilmington Housing Authority Chairman Barbara Larsen, a census employee, Wilmington selectmen have issued an official proclamation designating April 1 as official Census Day.

The proclamation is an effort to promote community awareness of the importance of an accurate census to the town of Wilmington, particularly when competing for federal or state funds.

On Friday, March 28, the postal service will deliver a 1980 Decennial Census Form to area residents.

Participation in the census by all residents is essential for proper distribution of Federal funds and determination of seats in the House of Representatives. Please return your census form by one of the following methods:

- Deposit the form in any local mailbox.
- Deposit the form at your local post office in the special container marked "1980 Decennial Census Returns."
- Give the completed form to your letter carrier or leave it in your mailbox for your carrier to pick up. Please complete the form and return your census form by April 4.

'No More Homework'

Lights at West Street 'greet' Miceli's traffic comments

The long wait for traffic lights at Lowell and West streets has become the long wait at the traffic lights. They were turned on last Thursday.

There used to be a store at the intersection called Elia's Busy Corner, run by the late John Elia, Sr. The corner that was busy then is pandemic now. Several factors, including Route 93 and industrial development off West Street, have resulted in an ever-increasing traffic load on the intersection.

For years, the town sought to have a traffic signal installed at the intersection. Drivers coming out of the West Street industrial area have a poor view of Lowell Street to the west. The corner has been the scene of countless accidents. State officials, though, were reluctant to have a traffic signal near the ramps to Route 93, fearing a traffic backup onto the interstate highway.

State Rep. Jim Miceli finally secured state approval for the lights, and it was up to the town to have them installed.

Meanwhile, the proposals to completely rebuild Lowell Street (Route 129) have been dragging on. Last Thursday, Miceli addressed a meeting of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce. His topic was the Route 129 project.

The luncheon meeting was held at the Casa di Fiori, located off West Street.

Last Thursday was also the first day that the new traffic signals were working. Traffic was backed up in three out of four directions, highlighting the topic on which Miceli was speaking.

"That light!" Miceli said. "I'll take the rap." He said that former D.P.W. Commissioner Robert Carroll had told him there would be no light at West Street, because of the potential backup problems.

"Today I saw the backup," Miceli said. "Carroll was right."

Probably the most shocked person at the meeting was John Forrest, who runs the Mobil station at the corner of Lowell and West streets. Miceli said that the rebuilding of Route 129 will include a median strip on Lowell Street. There will be no left turn possible, and traffic coming from Wilmington on Route 129 will not be able to reach Forrest's station.

One other gas station that will be impacted by Route 129 is the Shell station at Main and Lowell streets. Miceli said that the improvements to the intersection will eliminate the station.

Miceli also spoke of the changes that will take place in Wilmington Center. "Most of the businesses on the hill will go," he said. "Somebody once called it (the center) something out of an old cowboy movie."

Miceli said that the railroad bridge in Wilmington Center was rapidly deteriorating. He said that he had gone to the D.P.W. to try to secure an emergency appropriation for building a new bridge. He was told to wait, because the state was moving ahead with the Route 129 project.

The Route 129 proposal would eliminate the hill on Main Street in the center, and run Route 62 across a bridge over Main Street and the railroad tracks. A connecting ramp would run between Main Street and Church Street, and another new road would connect Church Street and Middlesex Avenue. That new street would carry all cars from Main Street to Burlington Avenue. Traffic going south on Main Street seeking to turn right onto Burlington Avenue would take a left of Middlesex Avenue, at the Weinberg site, and then turn onto the new road, which has been called Olson Road. The cars would then turn right onto Route 62, by the post office.

"I think it's a good plan, compared to what we've seen," Miceli said. He was referring to the total of 16 possible routes that had been studied by the state and its consulting engineers.

Miceli said that he hopes to ensure a good looking area in the center. I'm going to make this area attractive, not just concrete and steel," he said.

Ballardvale Street recommendations
Plans of proposed work on Ballardvale Street and Route 125 were also available, but were not discussed by Rep. Miceli.

Those plans show nothing of the proposed connection of Route 62

(Salem Street) to Route 125.

According to the plan as shown, there is recommended to be an additional slip ramp through the new Compugraphic property, from Route 125 to Route 93 northbound. The Compugraphic property, where a four story office building is currently being erected, was formerly the Bob Evans farm.

The plan also shows a recommended traffic control system to be installed at the intersection of Route 125 and Ballardvale Street, with additional widths for both streets.

Trilling wins bridge tourney

Perry Trilling, 30 Linda Rd., Wilmington and Robert Woodard of Dover were winners in their section of the Western States Open Pairs, a one-day bridge championship in which 616 players competed.

The event was among seven North American Championships and 12 lesser ranked championships which drew 4,400 players to 10 days of competitions. Bridge players of every class of skill compete during the meet, one of three major tournaments sponsored each year by the American Contract Bridge League (ACBL).

The ACBL is a non-profit organization of some 200,000 competitive players in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Bermuda. It conducts 850 tournaments a year and 4,500 clubs provide weekly games throughout the continent.

Police know Shriners vandal

The youth responsible for the vandalism at the Aleppo Temple last week has been apprehended by the Wilmington Police. Final disposition of the case is pending.

Chief Bobby Stewart said that only one youth was responsible for the damage, despite the presence of many youths in the area during the course of the night.

Dear Larz:

I am writing this letter because of certain allegations and misinformation currently circulating about the filling of a parcel on Main Street owned by Rocco DePasquale. These allegations were brought to the owner's attention by Anne Linehan, a candidate for the office of selectman.

The land in question is being filled with solid, clean fill, such as rocks and gravel. There are no tree stumps buried on the property. The land is not a wetland and does not require a Conservation Commission hearing.

It has been said that the property's owner, a town selectman, has been given preferential treatment by receiving free fill excavated from the sewer line presently under construction near his property.

letters to the editor

I would like to point out that this fill is equally available to any town resident who requests it. In fact, many loads of this same fill have been distributed to several other residents of the area.

The fill does not belong to the town of Wilmington. Once a bid is accepted, it becomes the property of the sewer contractor, who at his discretion and expense, can haul it anywhere in town. The normal procedure is to give it to residents of the immediate neighborhood. The factor governing how much fill an individual receives is the amount he requires and requests, not who he is or who he knows.

I became involved with this property because I was asked to handle the excavation and filling of the lot. I was glad to do this because I have more knowledge of construction and excavation than the (my brother) lot's owner, and also because one of the fringe benefits was about 10 cord of firewood. The property's excavation and filling does not require a permit because it is not considered a wetlands area. Stumps and brush removed from the property have been hauled to a landfill area in Amesbury.

Loam from the lot has been stockpiled and is being sold. If there are any doubts remaining about the validity of this project, my suggestion would be to contact the town manager for re-affirmation of the procedures involved. Too often people are misled and innocent individuals are hurt by deceptive measures which seek to put doubts in the minds of taxpayers about their elected officials.

People should seek out the facts before making erroneous statements at public gatherings which can easily become harmful and vicious rumors.

I would also like to point out that this piece of property was cleared and filled to its present area last November. Why should anyone wait until the following March to inquire about its conditions?

Sal DePasquale
40 Jacquith Road
Wilmington

Dear Larz,

As has been learned from recent newspaper articles the "Woburn Odor" is only a symptom of a larger and more serious problem - a chemical waste dumpsite located between Rt. 93 and New Boston Street, north of the Woburn Mall.

Development of this site has unearthed and left exposed animal parts and hazardous chemical wastes, such as arsenic and lead, dumped in the area for more than a century. The towns of Wilmington, Reading and Woburn have suffered from an obnoxious odor, and the Aberjona River leading into the Mystic Lakes has suffered from leaching pollutants. In addition to this, groundwater supplies in Wilmington, Woburn and Reading are being threatened.

The Mass. Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering has signed an agreement with the developer which could go into effect in the near future. Citizen groups, watershed associations, cancer chapters, conservation commissions, and boards of health are interested in stopping this development until appropriate testing can determine its impact on air, land, and water, and until more information can be gathered about its potential threat to public health. However, there has been a serious lack of providing information to the public and allowing citizen participation in the process of mapping out a method of cleaning up this dumpsite.

As continuing construction approaches the Wilmington town line, it is extremely important that all Wilmington residents express their concern about this serious health hazard.

Remember the putrid odor along Rt. 93 last summer? It is not gagging people in South Wilmington. Should we wait until we need to wear gas masks at Silver Lake this coming summer? I say the stench has already gone too far. What about you?

You can have your say at a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, April 1, at Trinity Episcopal Church, 535 Main Street (Rt. 38), Woburn, Ma. Speak now, or forever hold your breath!!

Joan Sadowski

Dear Larz:

I am requesting that my name not be used, but I am interested in the business that happened, a little over a week ago, on Fordham Road.

There were about 60 kids at the end of that road, having fun. You and I may not agree with everything they did, for there was beer drinking. These kids had been at another site, and were asked to leave, by the police, so they went down to Fordham Road.

One of those kids committed the violence, at the Shriners (Aleppo Temple). I understand the police know who he was. He smashed windows and did other damage, and the others who were at the end of Fordham Road did not know about it.

There has been a sort of outcry, on the part of some people, as a result, against those kids.

I repeat, Larz. There were kids there having a good time, but not taking part in the particular damage involved. They are good kids, I know some of them. They are growing up, and they do meet, here and there, and they do have a beer, too.

I have seen other incidents like that one, and the young people grew up to be good citizens of our town.

There may be an answer, but I would like to say that no one has come to the aid of these kids. If I could supply the answer I would. It is not one of having recrimination against a bunch of kids, believe me.

Name withheld by request

Dear Larz:

I have played girls softball for two years and I still have two years to play. All that our teams ever had were shirts and hats, and this year we were told that we were getting full uniforms and we sold raffle tickets to help out.

Now recently we were told that there was not enough money for full uniforms and this year again we will only get shirts and hats. I would like to know why there is enough money for the boys to have full uniforms, like every other year, but not enough for us?

Sincerely,
An 11-year-old
Softball player

Janet Flaherty

Linda Sue Bosano

Two local women - Linda Sue Bosano of Tewksbury, and Janet Flaherty of Wilmington - have announced that they have been selected as entrants in the 1980 Miss Massachusetts Pageant, to be held at the Worcester Memorial Auditorium on March 28 and 29.

The state pageant will select the Massachusetts representative to the Miss U.S.A. Pageant, which will be telecast from the Mississippi Gulf Coast on May 15.

One of the requirements of the Miss Massachusetts Pageant is that each entrant wear a costume descriptive of the area she represents. Linda Sue plans to wear an Indian outfit representative of the Wampanoag Indians who settled in Tewksbury.

Miss Flaherty plans to wear an apple outfit representative of the Baldwin Apple.

Article 22: To see if the Town will vote to amend the Zoning By-Law of the Town of Wilmington by adding a new section to the Wilmington Zoning By-Law as follows:

III-7 USES IN PLANNED RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENT - PRD DISTRICTS

A. General Objectives - The PRD District is intended to allow greater flexibility in land use planning for the development of tracts of land in terms of preservation of open spaces, utilization of natural features and provision of a variety of housing types and styles; to ensure that overall development plans will be presented to the Town Meeting in connection with any proposal to rezone a tract of land to PRD District; and to enable the Planning Board to require adherence to such overall development plans in the granting of a special permit which shall control all aspects of the proposed PRD as hereinafter described.

B. Town Meeting Presentation - Every proposal presented to Town Meeting for rezoning land to a PRD District shall include an overall development plan which shall show in a general manner, drawn to scale, including natural features, existing the limits of the Flood Plain District and Wetlands as determined and regulated in accordance with G.L.c. 131 Sec. 40, "The Wetlands Protection Act," the proposed locations, types and floor plans for proposed buildings and other structures, proposed location of streets, drives, parking areas and other paved areas, the proposed grading of the site and the proposed open space. A copy of the overall development plan, which shall be deemed to include any literature and comments, authorized by the developer which will be or has been presented to Town Meeting shall be filed with the Town Clerk together with the Article to rezone the subject site to PRD District.

b. Accessory uses incidental to the principal residential uses indicated above.

4. Lot Area, Frontage and Yard Requirements - There shall be no minimum lot area, frontage or yard requirements within a PRD.

5. Height - No building shall be more than two and one-half stories or 38 feet in height.

6. Each unit shall be serviced by municipal water and municipal sewer.

Such restriction shall provide that the Common Open Space shall be retained in perpetuity for one or more of the following uses: conservation, open space, agriculture, recreation or park. Such restriction shall be in such form and substance as the Planning Board may prescribe and deem appropriate.

c. In order to ensure that the corporation, non-profit organization or trust will properly maintain the Common Open Space and other common property an instrument(s) shall be recorded at the Middlesex North District Registry of Deeds which shall as a minimum provide:

(1) A legal description of the Common Open Space.

(5) Provisions for the number, term of office, and the manner of election to office, removal from office and the filling of vacancies in the office of directors and/or officers of the corporation or non-profit organization or trustee of the trust.

(6) Procedures for the conduct of the affairs and business of the corporation, non-profit organization or trust including provision for the calling and holding of meetings of members and directors and/or officers of the corporation or non-profit organization or trustees of the trust and voting requirements for action to be taken. Each owner of a dwelling shall have voting rights proportional to his ownership or beneficial interest in the corporation, non-profit organization or trust.

(7) Provision for the management, maintenance, operation, improvement and repair of the Common Open Space and facilities thereon, including provisions for obtaining and maintaining adequate insurance and levying and collecting from the dwelling owners common charges to pay for expenses associated with the Common Open Space, including real estate taxes. It shall be provided that common charges are to be allocated among the dwelling owners in proportion to their ownership or beneficial interests in the corporation, non-profit organization or trust, and that each dwelling owner's share of the common charge shall be a lien against his real estate in the PRD, which shall have priority over all other liens with the exception of municipal liens and first mortgages of record, and

(8) The method by which such instrument or instruments may be amended.

10. Limitation of Subdivision - No lot shown on a plan for which a PRD permit is granted may be further subdivided, and a notation to this effect shall be placed on the recorded lotting plan.

11. Special Provisions for the Wilmington Housing Authority - Except as provided in Subsection 4. Lot Area, Frontage and Yard Requirements, Subsection 6. Height and Subsection 6. Utilities, the limitations contained in Section C. PRD Standards shall not apply to a PRD which will be owned by the Wilmington Housing Authority, provided that upon Town Meeting approval of the rezoning the Planning Board finds that the proposed design is generally consistent with the purposes and objectives of this By-Law.

D. Procedure For Rezoning and Approval

1. Town Meeting Submission and Rezoning a. Any person who submits a Warrant Article to rezone land to a PRD District shall comply with the provisions of Section B. Town Meeting Presentation and shall meet with the Planning Board and file eight sets of an overall development plan and supporting documents which shall be prepared by an interdisciplinary development team comprised of a Registered Professional Engineer, Registered Land Surveyor, Architect, Landscape Architect or similar professionals approved in writing by the Planning Board.

b. The Planning Board shall, within ten days of receipt of a submission hereunder, refer the application to the Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water and Sewer Commission, Police and Fire Departments, Town Engineer and Building Inspector for written reports and recommendations and no decision shall be made until such reports are returned or 35 days have elapsed following such referral without receipt of such reports.

c. Planning Board Decision - A special permit which shall control all aspects of the proposed PRD shall be issued only if the Planning Board finds that the plans submitted to it for a special permit conform substantially to the overall development plan presented to Town Meeting and that the PRD is in harmony with the objectives and intent of this PRD section. If a special permit is granted, the Planning Board may impose as a condition thereof that the installation of municipal services and construction of interior drives within the PRD shall comply with the requirements of the Subdivision Rules and Regulations of the Planning Board, may require sufficient security to ensure such compliance and the completion of planned recreation facilities and site amenities, and may impose such additional safeguards as public safety, welfare and convenience may require.

(2) Copies of the proposed instruments to be recorded with the plans including the Common Open Space perpetual restriction, the deed and the membership corporation, non-profit organization or trust instrument.

(3) Development plans bearing the seal of a Registered Professional Engineer, Registered Land Surveyor, Architect, Landscape Architect or similar professional as appropriate and consisting of: a. Site Plan and specifications showing all site improvements and meeting, to the extent applicable, the requirements set forth for a Definitive Plan in the Subdivision Rules and Regulations of the Planning Board; b. Site perspective, sections, elevations 1/4 inch equals 1 foot and typical floor plans 1/4 inch equals 1 foot; c. Detail plans for disposal of sanitary sewage, solid waste and surface drainage; and d. ## Barrett: Adjust for the '80's

by State Rep. Michael Barrett

One short definition of inflation, "too many dollars chasing too few goods," is easy to understand because it involves an analogy between the functioning of our capitalist economy and the workings of an ordinary auction. When the public has plenty of dollars to put into competing bids, the prices of goods at an auction, and in the general economy, go up. When available dollars decrease, the bidding cools down, and prices relax.

One reason for soaring energy costs is that around the world, around the country, around Massachusetts and in our own town, is that many people have the money to bid up limited supplies of gasoline, heating oil and electricity. In the United States we have the funds because American salaries kept pace with inflation all through the 1970's, a trend which ended only months ago. We lack plentiful energy for a host of reasons, and so we compete.

The idea of too many dollars chasing too few goods is the basis for our political leaders' suggested solutions for energy-related inflation. President Carter, for example, will increase the cost of oil with an import fee, so that it becomes more expensive for us to bid for our current quotas of energy and more urgent to reduce consumption instead. Presidential aspirant John Anderson, to cite another example, proposes a fifty cents a gallon tax on gasoline in order to accomplish the same thing. Whatever their differences, the prescriptions of all the candidates have the same target group in mind: us, the American citizenry, including the residents of Wilmington. This isn't because we kicked off the price stampede; OPEC nations wielded the heavy hand in fixing the rules by which the energy auction is run. But we are the bidders who continue to push the prices higher when we function as homeowners, as purchasers and operators of cars, as workers and decision-makers in business, and as members of government.

Slowing the bidding down - not only for energy, but for all goods and services - will be a familiar theme of the 80's. The seriousness of the problem will persuade not only the federal and state governments, but individual towns, to make themselves comfortable with innovation. Developments such as these are likely to happen (and should) in this area: Conservation will come to be valued not only for its more commonly recognized purpose, insuring the continuity of energy supplies, but also for its usefulness as an anti-inflation strategy which can be applied at the community level. Individual towns will designate an official to serve as energy coordinator, and among the coordinator's duties will be arranging "energy audits" so that individual families can compute the costs and benefits of conservation-related home improvements.

One of the unique energy assets available to Wilmington - its access to a publicly-owned and publicly-controlled electric company in Reading - will grow in value as the company assumes a more visible conservation role.

New England's strong tradition of local autonomy will be adjusted carefully to allow critically important cooperation among towns, because regional approaches to conservation and recycling projects like trash-generated power plants are the most cost-efficient. State and federal matching grant programs for local energy activities will no longer employ the same funding formula for every community applicant, but will instead reserve special funding "bonuses" for towns which share projects with their neighbors.

Another of this area's unique energy assets - the presence of commuter rail lines - will undergo improvements in service and increases in patronage. Wilmington will also capitalize on a third major asset - proximity to Routes 128 and I-93 - by pressing for the institution of public transit by bus along these arteries.

Because of its special advantages, Wilmington has one of the best opportunities of any medium-sized towns in the entire state to adjust successfully to the energy-conscious 80's. In pursuing these advantages and developing other ones, we can save ourselves money by reducing consumption and scaling down our participation in the energy auction. Regardless of whom we elect as President this year, this is precisely what he will ask of us.

Newcomers offer entertainment, information

Everyone attending the April 1 meeting of the Wilmington Newcomers Club will be doubly entertained and informed by a fashion show sponsored by Polka Dot Junction and a presentation by the League of Women Voters of Wilmington. The meeting, open to the public without charge, will be held at the Wilmington Memorial Library on Middlesex Avenue at 8 p.m.

A very interesting presentation by the League will include information about town government; some very interesting facts about the water, and a short slide show. This discussion is very timely with upcoming town elections, town meeting, and widespread concern over water quality and quantity. The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization open to both men and women over 18 who are interested in being informed about and involved in the democratic process.

Members of the Newcomers Club are reminded to take donations for the Easter basket going to a family from St. Thomas' Church. Donations can be items of canned goods, Easter candy, a loaf of bread, and anything similar.

The Wilmington Newcomers Club was formed in 1978 in order to provide a warm welcome to new people in town. For further information or a ride to the meeting, contact Diane Ferguson, the club's president, 658-6837.

Driver left the scene, but he left a trail

Officer Larry Redding followed a culprit's trail on Monday night, without the aid of a magnifying glass.

Police received a call from the Wilmington Fire Department about 11 p.m., reporting that a car had taken down a section of fence in the Fire Department yard, and hit the Post Office.

Redding responded, and found that the car had left the scene, but with a damaged wheel. Redding followed a groove in the pavement. It led from the Post Office, through Wilmington Center and down Burlington Avenue. In a yard on Burlington Avenue, with the trail leading to it, was a car with one wheel tipped on its side. The driver was just going in the door of the house, Redding said.

He went to the door, and the driver's father answered. Redding then confronted and issued a citation to Philip Valente, age 19, for reckless driving, and for leaving the scene of an accident after causing property damage.

While on this team mission Sherry and her co-workers will put in a five and a half day work week with Saturday afternoons free. On Sunday they will be sharing their love of the Lord in various churches in Mexico.

Miss Reed will be gone for eight weeks and will return to her home in Wilmington to share her summer experience with all her friends.

It is sponsored by Medford Pediatric Associates and the Cambridge - Middlesex Lung Association.

Joseph Valatka wins spelling contest

Recently, in preparation for sending a school representative to the local spelling bee in Lowell, Shawsheen Elementary School in Wilmington has held a series of classroom run-offs. Each of the 170 sixth grade students received a copy of the official spelling list which consisted of approximately 1500 words. Each classroom has its own spelling bee in which three representatives of the seven classrooms would compete to see who would be the school representative to the Lowell Sun Spelling Bee, to be held on April 18 at Durgin Hall, University of Lowell.

The final round was given to Robert Romano, language arts director for the Wilmington Public Schools. After much spine - tingling tension, the state was down to two boys, Joseph Valatka of Room B-11 and Chris Cassidy of Room C-23. The final word was given. Chris misspelled it. Joseph now had the chance to become the winner. He spelled the previous word correctly and then proceeded to spell the next word correctly to become the school champion and representative to Lowell.

Joseph Valatka is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Valatka of 7 Wilton Dr., Wilmington. He began reading at the age of three, using the telephone directory as his basis. By the age of five he was reading, with some comprehension, Reader's Digest. He has many varied interests and hobbies such as rug hooking, collector of records and mystery novels and drum player.

Joe's immediate aspiration is to win the Lowell contest and fly to the national spelling bee in Washington, D.C. in May.

Forum on hazardous wastes

How are the hazardous wastes discovered in Woburn affecting its citizens and those of neighboring communities?

A public forum will be held on Tuesday, April 1, at 7:30 p.m., at Trinity Church, 535 Main St., Woburn, to answer this and other questions from local citizens. Representatives from the U.S. EPA, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering will be on hand.

The forum is sponsored by the Mystic River Watershed Association and is supported by the League of Women Voters of Reading, Wilmington and Winchester, the New England Office of Friends of the Earth and Citizens Against Pollution.

Background: Development of the North Woburn Industrial Park has unearthed arsenic, zinc, lead, chromium, and copper, as well as partially decomposed animal hides which are said to contribute to the "Woburn Odor." On May 22, 1979, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Quality Engineering closed two wells supplying drinking water which they found to contain trichloroethylene (an industrial solvent) and chloroform.

It's not too late

It is not too late to destroy gypsy moth egg masses.

The insects pass the winter as velvety buff-colored egg masses attached to trees, leaves, stone walls, rocks, and other shaded objects. Caterpillars hatch in late April or early May.

Control - paint with creosote. Care should be used so as not to overpaint. Scrape off egg masses. Destroy by burning or dipping in oil.

If scraped off and allowed to drop, they will still hatch.

Because of the mild winter, a heavy infestation is expected.

A change in tactics may be indicated in solving speeding and other traffic problems for the residents of North Wilmington's Heather Drive. Tightened up law enforcement and better communication between North Reading and Wilmington whose town lines meet where Heather Drive becomes Green Street will likely take the place of an earlier plan to abandon a portion of Heather Drive to prevent through traffic.

Residents of Heather Drive had requested that a three-foot portion of the street be discontinued. The selectmen had allowed the North Wilmington group to draft an article, Number 23 on the warrant for the April 26 Town Meeting, which would make that portion of the street a private way. However, after conferring with the Wilmington Planning Board, the North Reading Planning Commission and Wilmington Town Counsel Alan Altman, the selectmen appear to be having a change of heart. A vote on the matter will be taken on April 14.

Among the problems that surfaced at a March 12 and March 24 hearing on the proposed article was the question of whether or not it would be legal to create a dead end street where one does not now exist.

"If this petition goes through at Town Meeting, we will be in violation of the official map," said John DeRoy, chairman of the Wilmington Planning Board. "We would then have to go to the attorney general and I am quite sure he would turn it down."

In addition, DeRoy said, his board's rules stipulate that it is illegal to dead end any road which is longer than 500 feet. Heather Drive is more than twice that, or 1,218 feet in length.

While tighter law enforcement measures have been in effect now for the past two weeks, however, Heather Drive resident John P. Casey told selectmen he hadn't noticed any improvement in the numbers of cars using the road. Casey said he was even more concerned with those cars which were speeding.

"We are very concerned about the safety of our children." It only takes one speeding car to kill or maim a child," Casey said. It was, he said, an issue of "inconvenience versus safety."

Ruth Kennedy, planning coordinator for the North Reading Planning Commission reported at the hearing that a three-day study of the number of cars using Green Street to Heather Drive route indicated a daily average of 69 vehicles. From these, however, she pointed out, another 10 to 14 vehicles would have to be deducted as construction vehicles which will no longer be present when the nine-home development on the North Reading side is completed by builder Ralph Newhouse.

Regarding enforcement, she said, North Reading's police department would assign a cruiser to the area whenever possible and would undertake an on-going public safety program. Wilmington Police Chief Bobby Stewart has also pledged to increase surveillance in the area and has assigned Safety Officer Robert Shelley to meet with residents regarding specific date and complaints.

According to Kennedy, the North Reading Department of Public Works believes that blocking off the street would "present a very dangerous situation" by limiting access for emergency vehicles.

"We are at a stalemate," said Chairman of the Board of Selectmen Rocco DePasquale. "There is a problem, but we are trying to solve it. We are asking various departments and boards to come up with some answers for us. If we take the next step and encourage you to discontinue the road it would be wrong."

The selectmen also heard from Bruce Romagnoli, a representative of the American National Insurance Company, about a supplementary fringe benefit program available to town employees. The plan would involve optional weekly payroll deductions resulting in a monthly benefit to be paid to the employee upon retirement in addition to social security or other retirement benefits.

In other business, the selectmen voted unanimously to approve the application of the General Electric Company to Fordham Road, to increase their storage of inflammable materials. New permits will enable G.E. to increase their inflammable storage to 25,000 cubic feet of hydrogen and 550 gallons of liquid oxygen. A spokesman for the company said the increased storage would enable them to cut down delivery of inflammable material from a project 30 to 40 deliveries per week to a safer 10 to 15 deliveries per week.

Eleven criminal arrests and two protective custody detentions were made; nine disturbances were quieted and 11 vandalism and malicious damage incidents were reported.

Fifteen larcenies were reported during week, in which stolen items included siphoned gasoline, car batteries, junk parts, hockey equipment, C.B. radios, three 10 speed bikes, and other assorted articles. One car was reported stolen; 11 incidents of suspicious activity were reported by observant citizens; three trespassing complaints were investigated and four break and entries into homes and businesses were investigated. During the week officers checked out several shooting complaints, and traffic complaints along with other varied requests.

A break and entry was reported Thursday morning at seven o'clock at the Ski Haus on Lowell Street despite the culprits activating the alarm. Inspector Ballou reported several pair of running shoes and ski jackets were taken.

Officer Gabe investigated a break at Big Joe's Sub Shop in Wilmington Center around 5 a.m. Sunday. A small amount of money was taken. Inspector Ballou is investigating further.

Officers are investigating two house breaks that occurred this week. One on Brand Avenue and the other on Ferguson. Both breaks took place in the day time and the houses were ransacked.

Shooting for light heavyweight crown

Wilmington's Jim McNally - a professional with a purpose

by Rick Cooke

Often when you think of a professional boxer - even the younger pro - you think of an athlete who has had his brains rattled by the most brutal of sports. Someone who has probably been offered a golden opportunity to take a dive for the big payday. Someone who has seen the underbelly of a sport that chews up young men and spits them out at the same rate that it is offering golden opportunities for the young Golden Gloves to make at least a temporary break to the other side of the tracks.

Wilmington's Jim McNally is one young professional fighter who so far has avoided the pitfalls that can swallow a guy who has decided to pursue a career in the ring.

McNally, 23 years old and a former three sport star at Wilmington High School, has been a pro in the light heavyweight division for a year now, compiling a 9-1 record against a mixture of ring veterans and forget-me-nots, working his way up the ladder slowly with four knockouts to his credit.

Jim hopes to fight 28-year-old veteran Don Addison for the New England light heavyweight championship "in about six months," but advises that his manager, Johnny Gagliardi, is bringing him along slowly in preparation for that big payday.

Wilmington's light heavy now plays the patient waiting game that the young pro must endure in what he hopes will be a slow steady march to the top. Just ask Marvin Hagler about the virtues of patience, although in this game it can't always be said that good things come to those who wait.

The most recent step

Jim's most recent step up that fight ladder was February 26 at the Northeast Trade Center in Woburn where, true to his style as a boxer rather than a brawler, he earned an eight round decision over Jose Riveras, a veteran of over 100 pro fights.

"It went the full eight rounds, he's a tough guy to put away," offered McNally after the fight. I had the flu the week before, but that wasn't really a factor.

"I've fought him twice now and both fights have gone the full eight rounds. He's been around and he's pretty ringwise. I didn't get hit much in the face, but I took a lot of body shots. It's good experience fighting someone like him who's been around," said the young light heavyweight.

That's the key word here, experience. McNally, who has had at least eight fights cancelled and sometimes must accept last minute substitutions for opponents, will take the ring time - for now.

He must be ready for anything, as was the case this past year when he was scheduled to fight Addison at the Hartford Civic Center. Addison couldn't make the fight and McNally wound up in there against Eddie Phillips, who had just come off a tough fight with Michael Spinks - the Olympics Michael Spinks.

Jim took Phillips for a decision and Addison went on to defeat Matt Ross to gain his title. It appears that McNally and Addison could be headed for what should be an interesting collision course later this year.

But before Jim even thinks about any titles he must take another step, this time against Frank Dunton at Portland, Maine in April.

"He's a big puncher, a heavy hitter. It makes for a good fight, I like fighting guys like that. It makes boxing a little easier," says McNally, an admitted stylist in the ring.

"He doesn't look like a fighter - he's got a nice face"

He's still young yet, but it's doubtful if McNally ever will resemble the punch-drunk loser hanging on just to take another cheap banging.

During our interview a woman who has never really seen Jimmy in the flesh says, "he doesn't look like a fighter, he's got a nice face."

Very few professional fighters, aside from Muhammed Ali, whom McNally has met, can lay claim to look like they are perpetually ready for the prep school junior prom.

"I've been lucky, really lucky," says McNally who admits to having his nose broken, his ribs broken and his ear split open. But as far as a real mashing in a meat grinder, well McNally has yet to experience that in 48 amateur fights as both a heavyweight and a light heavyweight along with his 10 pro bouts.

Of course McNally has one very distinct advantage. The guy's name is Bernie, a former New England heavyweight champion. Bernie McNally is Jimmy's father.

A ringwise Dad in his corner

McNally compiled a 41-7 slate as an amateur from 1973 to 1978, winning Golden Gloves titles as both a heavyweight and a light heavyweight. His one loss as a light heavyweight came at the Nationals in Hawaii in 1978.

Behind all those victories are Jimmy's hard work and a Dad who began giving Jimmy ring tips at the age of two.

Bernie McNally, N.E. heavyweight champ 1947-48 and three-time Golden Gloves champ, is his son's number one advisor to this day.

"He's my real trainer, he's been training me since I was about two," offers Jim. I can remember my father coming home at night, getting me out of bed and saying 'show me the jab, show me the jab.'"

"We went to the Golden Gloves for years and watched when I was eight, nine, 10 years old. But he never really wanted me to box. He told me that it was a dirty racket, that you can get a lot of cutthroats. I'm lucky I have him. He knows the ropes and he steers me in the right direction," said McNally.

"He used to work my corner. He doesn't anymore because he gets too nervous, but he's at the gym every day."

It was Bernie, a World War II veteran and a victim of osteomyelitis, a bone disease that he receives treatments for at the Bedford Veterans' Hospital, who was primarily responsible for making his son into a boxer rather than a brawler, while also steering him in the right directions outside the ring.

"There are a lot of guys - real ragmen they call them - who are just looking to make a buck. I was surprised to see some of the things that I've seen, but it happens," offers McNally.

It's not unusual for a young fighter to take it on the chin financially even before he steps into the ring. "I know different kids who have been sent down to fight in different cities and they were told that the purse would be $3,000 or whatever against top notch fighters. They'll go down there and get hit that fight, come back and give a third to their manager - that leaves them with $2,000 - but in reality the manager was calling down there and the fight was worth $7,000."

"So on top of the $1,000 he's getting from the fight, he's getting another $4,000 sent to him. Promoters talk to each other. That happens a lot. You don't hear about it because it's hush-hush, but you know that it happens," said McNally.

"But you've got to put your trust in someone and how do you know that the person you're putting your trust in is going to be trustworthy? - you don't," admits Jim.

"But I have my father and that's everything. People in the business know my father."

About six months ago McNally, who had been approached by several organizations after turning pro, hooked up with Gagliardi and a group of Boston businessmen who go under the banner of New England Sportsmen Inc.

The group has supplied Jim with all the equipment that he's needed and a corner of Pete O'Teri, Gagliardi's uncle who also trained Bernie McNally and Gagliardi; and cut man Johnny Dunn, who has trained former light heavyweight champ of the world Bob Foster.

"There's only so much fight inside of you"

McNally has taken a wise route along the ring way. He boxes people, trying to pile up points with jabs and ring savvy. It seems to be working just fine, thank you.

"I don't go out there looking to knock anybody out, but if I hurt somebody I can take them out of there," said McNally. "Like my father says, if you go out there looking to knock somebody out, you're open."

"I like to win it the easiest way I can without getting hit. I don't want to go out there and get all banged up because they take their toll. You lose a little bit every time you get hit. There's only so much fight inside of you," offered Jimmy.

His four KO's in nine pro fights attest to the fact that Jimmy has got some sting in both hands, but a brawler in the Joe Frazier mold he's not.

"I always liked the style of John Conteh, the English fighter," says McNally. "Different guys from my father's era always said that I remind them of Billy Conn."

Conn, a tough fighter in the 1940's, fought Joe Louis twice for the heavyweight championship, piling up points in both bouts before being knocked out both times in the 13th round.

From heavy to light heavy

McNally fought most of his amateur career as a heavyweight, taking the shots thrown by fighters bigger and stronger than he was at that stage in his career.

His skills as a boxer enabled him to more than survive, but he's glad that he reversed the step that most fighters follow.

"Most people go up but I did it the other way. I'll probably end up as a featherweight," laughed McNally.

McNally, who played football on a scholarship to the University of Las Vegas for one season after graduating from Wilmington High School in 1973, feels that the move to a light heavyweight has been a boost to his pro boxing aspirations.

"When I was a heavyweight I was playing football in college and lifting

The Kid meets The Champ

by Rick Cooke

Early in his professional boxing career Jim McNally had a rare opportunity to bob and weave with former heavyweight champion Muhammed Ali when the two were on the same card at the Providence Civic Center.

Ali fought an exhibition bout and McNally picked up a win on that same card, but the Wilmington fighter's most interesting exchange of the night was in Ali's dressing room.

Jim first met Ali at the weigh-in for the card that featured Marvin Hagler in the main event. At that time he asked the champ if he could have his picture taken with him. The champ said sure, fight night kid, bring your camera.

"I didn't expect to see him at the weigh-in because he was only fighting an exhibition. I didn't have my camera with me and I really wanted to get a picture of him, so he told me to come around to his dressing room later on," recalls McNally.

"I fought the first fight of the night and I went to his dressing room afterward. There were three black guys out in front, all about 6-7," remembers McNally.

"There were a million people standing around, Associated Press and stuff like that, and I said the champ said I could go in and take his picture."

McNally was in for a first hand look at Ali and his entourage that can be expected to often times play it by ear. "The champ's meditating they said. What am I going to say, I'm not going to argue with these guys right?"

Jimmy Ellis, an Ali sparring partner and a former champ himself, came walking by and gave the front men the word.

"Let the kid in." "I go in there and there's Ali with boxer shorts on wrestling some big old fat guy," laughs McNally.

"Ali came at me throwing punches, and I ducked one," said McNally. "He said 'this white boy's bad', recalls McNally. "He had me in tears. I've never seen anyone put across so much appeal to the public."

Ali, in the process of making a much discussed comeback in an attempt to win the championship for the

A professional with a purpose

weights so I was kind of keeping my weight up. Once I stopped lifting weights and increased my road work it (the pounds) went pretty quick. I was surprised at how easy it came off."

McNally fights at 172 now, and says that it's no big deal to see his weight climb to 200 pounds between bouts. He works to get down to that quick weight for each fight however.

"I feel quicker as a light heavyweight - and they don't hit as hard as the heavyweights either, that's the big thing," offers McNally. "When I was a heavyweight I was even more of a boxer. I couldn't go inside with those guys. They out-weighted me, and they were stronger than me. But now I can go inside and be more effective," said McNally.

A baby-faced brawler
"It was the most nervous that I've ever been in my life," admits McNally when recalling his first fight as an amateur in the Lowell Golden Gloves. "They draw names, and I drew the biggest guy in my weight class, he was 28 years old and from Vermont."

"When they drew me the guy sort of looked over at his manager and said no problem, because I guess I was sort of a baby faced kid," said Jimmy.

This big bird from Vermont was in for a rude awakening however, when the baby-faced kid from Wilmington sent him to the canvass early.

"Through my first 30 amateur fights that was the only time that I ever knocked anybody out cold," recalled McNally.

That big knockout didn't send McNally looking to deliver the big KO punch with every fight.

"That was my first year and everybody in school told me that they liked going to my fights because I went right at people. But my father quickly changed that. I was walking around the school with black eyes." "I don't walk around with black eyes anymore, but I don't knock people out too much anymore either. My father said, what do you want to be - a banged up fighter or a boxer who wins?"

Obviously that 17-year-old kid who sent that brawler from Vermont to the canvass back in that first fight has become a 23-year-old boxer who wins.

Take home pay - seven dollars
McNally's first professional fight was a second round TKO of Lawrence's Mike Corsetti last March. The purse was $100.00, and by the time McNally got through paying his manager, the license fee and the price of the annual electrocardiogram and brain scan, he was left with the hefty take home pay of seven dollars.

Hardly on a big time pay scale, but the bigger paydays have been coming, with four and eight round decisions over Eddie Phillips at the Hartford Civic Center and a good offer to fight Addison for the title. But McNally and his handlers prefer to wait until the time is right for such a weighty challenge.

The one defeat
Jim's one professional setback came in his sixth pro bout, a third round TKO to Fred Boynton (17-1) at New York, New Jersey four months ago.

McNally, 5-0 at the time, recalls what for him has been a rare experience. "I thought that I knew everyone around. I never heard of this guy."

Jimmy surely knew who Boynton was when the fight ended prematurely in the third round. "The first round I found myself on my back and the referee saying five..... six, and a said, back up, where's one through four?" recalls McNally.

"I finished the round, I got up and won the second round on all the judges scoreboards, and in the third round I got knocked down twice. I guess the second time I was just out on my feet and the referee stopped it."

"I got home that night, and you wouldn't even know that I was in a fight because everything he caught me with was right on the chin," said McNally.

"It woke me up, let me know where I was at," recalls Jimmy. "This guy was at an international level and it made me realize that I needed more experience before I can go in against guys like this."

"You learn more when you lose than you do when you win, and believe me I learned," offered Jimmy.

Death at your doorstep
Several months ago the boxing world stood up and took notice of the fact that death is just a solid punch at the wrong time away. Willie Classen, a pro, was pushed back out for the start of a round that never should have been. Several solid punches later Willie was on his back. He lay in a coma for many days before finally he died, a victim of what McNally admits is a brutal game.

Jimmy has seen death at the boxing doorstep take the life of a person he admired, Pat Hernandez, a Harvard football player, from the Bronx, New York who just liked to box.

"I was training for the Nationals in 1978," recalls McNally. There was a kid that I sparred with one time. He went down once when we were training and his people jumped in and said, that's it, that's it, he's hurt." "He fought two nights later and with the first punch that he got hit with he went down, hit his head on the ring and never came out of a coma. He died."

Jimmy's sparring partner who just two nights later hit the deck for the final time was Pat Hernandez, his death striking McNally harder than a good stiff right to the ribs.

"I felt so awful when that kid died that I took a couple of months off. I felt really bad," remembers McNally. "I was just hurt that I knew someone that this happened to. It was unfortunate. If I ever did it well, I don't know what I'd do."

"I'm glad they stopped the fight in New Jersey (his only loss) because I was out on my feet in a daze and wasn't defending myself."

"It happens" offers McNally. "I think about the referee stopping the fight...I think about the boxing commission."

It's safe to say that Jim McNally also thinks about Pat Hernandez, a young man he obviously respected and admired.

"I want to win, but I don't want to hurt anybody. I just try to get them out there as quick as I can." A rule of this game that can not be overlooked-stop the other man.

A daily routine
McNally, like any fighter who wants to still be standing in the late rounds of a rugged bout, follows a daily training ritual that he works around his schedule of tending bar daily from 11-6 p.m. at the Manning Manse restaurant in Billerica.

He trains approximately 20 hours every week, setting aside two days of sparring in Boston and also working out at Lowell's West End Gym.

He runs four miles four mornings a week and teams that with gym work on those nights after work. Three days a week he works out on the Nautilus equipment with the help of former WHS football and Atlanta Falcon running back Mike Esposito at Esposito's Merrimack Valley Nautilus Center at the Billerica Tennis Club.

Jim credits the Nautilus work with helping him to maintain his strength as a light heavyweight. Esposito, McNally says, has altered some of the machines to further help him with his punching power.

McNally has also worked out at the Brockton gym of middleweight contender Hagler.

Looking for a career
McNally is far from just a guy looking to make a permanent name for himself in the ring while tending bar on the side. Jimmy is looking for a career in criminal justice, having pocketed a BA in the field at Northeastern University, where he transferred after one year at the University of Las Vegas.

He has taken the Civil Service Exam, worked for a time in the Department of Youth Services and is interested in the State Police.

He decided to leave Las Vegas, come home and try his hand at some serious boxing. But what is important is that McNally didn't neglect an education for the ring.

"I was really serious about boxing so I gave my scholarship up and paid for it (school) myself," remembers Jim.

Jim, who played tight end at Las Vegas and was a standout on the football, basketball and baseball teams at Wilmington High, came home, enrolled at Northeastern and received his degree in 1977.

Jim will know when to quit
McNally is willing to give himself some time to get to the top of the fight game, but it appears that he will realize when and if that dream of a championship is unreachable.

"I want to go as far as I can and I don't want to get hurt. If I start getting to a point where I'm up against guys that I'm getting hurt with I'll call it a career," advises McNally.

McNally is hardly ready to retire to the pugilists' old folks home. At 23 he is in the starting stages of what could be the road to a title. He is prepared. "My father always said, I don't want you to do it, but if you're going to do it be in shape. He pushes me hard in that respect."

When push comes to shove in the ring, Jim McNally will be there, ready for that crack at a championship.

Ali

fourth time, impressed McNally, who remembers the champ in his heyday. "I can't figure it out," McNally says of Ali's comeback. "I wish he would have stayed out and been remembered the way he was."

But like most of us who revered the great skills of Ali in his prime, McNally holds out hope that the champ can turn back the clock one more time and make at least a respectable showing.

"Maybe he can do it. There's not that much around," said McNally who thinks that John Tate is no match for Larry Holmes in a heavyweight title showdown.

"But someday he's gonna weigh 300 pounds," says McNally, of an Ali currently trying to peel his way down from 250. "He just can't keep the weight off anymore."

Now wouldn't this be a matchup. The year is 1983. Ali, at 300 pounds is trying to win the title for a record sixth time. His opponent is a ringwise 26-year-old by the name of McNally. Just hang on a couple more years champ. And stay away from the vanilla frappes and Big Macs.

Notebook next week

Due to space limitations the Sports Notebook and spring sports schedules will not appear as promised in this week's Town Crier. Look for the Sports Notebook in next week's Crier along with the spring schedules.

Included in the Notebook will be a look at Tewksbury High School's wrestling banquet and a tip of the hat to a Shawsheen Tech hockey stand-out.

Sullivan's gets at least a piece, 67-66

Sullivan's Insurance assured themselves of at least a piece of the second half championship with a 67-66 win over first half winner M&S Mobil in heated Tewksbury Men's Basketball League action Thursday night at the TMHS gym.

The victory gives Sullivan's a 6-2 slate for the second half, with the Jade East one game back at 5-2 with one game left in the regular season - this Thursday night with Mobil in a 7 p.m. tapoff.

Thursday's second game has been declared a Wang Labs forfeit to Aubut's Liquors with Wang recently dropping out of the league.

The Jade East, coming back after a one win-last place finish during the first half of the season, can now tie Sullivan's 6-2 slate for the second half.

The Jade East is one game back at 5-2 with one game left in the regular season - this Thursday night with Mobil in a 7 p.m. tapoff.

Thursday's second game has been declared a Wang Labs forfeit to Aubut's Liquors with Wang recently dropping out of the league.

A win would give both Sullivan's and the Jade East 6-2 marks for the second half and force a playoff game to determine who plays for the league championship.

If Mobil should defeat the Jade East, then Sullivan's and Mobil would play for the championship Thursday night, April 3. If an additional playoff game is necessary then the league championship game will be pushed back one week.

Mobil had a chance to win Thursday's contest, with possession of the ball and six seconds left to play, but a last ditch play went awry to give Sullivan's the hard fought win.

Jim Meuse, playing on a gimpy knee for several weeks, had his jumper in high gear for the winners, hitting for 20 points. Forward Mike Manna was tough around both backboards and finished with 14, and center Mickey Sullivan contributed 13 to the victory.

Tom Brackett and Paul Stevens each had eight points for the winners.

Mobil's Barry Sheehan took game high honors with 28 points, Keith Caveney fired in 12 and Brian Irwin finished with 10 points. Guard Gene Manley contributed eight to the Mobil attack.

Standings	Second half

A Tewksbury-Wilmington gym - not a bad idea

Wilmington light heavyweight Jim McNally would like to work with youngsters - and eventually he would like that work to be in a gymnasium, training young boxers in the Wilmington and Tewksbury area.

"I'd love to open a gym to help kids," says McNally. The West End Gym in Lowell is helping to keep 400 kids off the street."

"The kids around here have some athletic ability. The Lowell kids have no athletic background, they're just physically tough kids. If you told them to go into a corner and do 20 jumping jacks they'd say - what's that?"

"They're hungry, they want money, they're just tough kids," says McNally.

McNally would like to see a good boxing program developed in Wilmington and Tewksbury as an athletic outlet for youngsters who don't play interscholastic sports.

"I'd like to develop a real good program. We have a lot of tough disciplined kids in this area," says McNally.
